Baldness Due To Alopecia Can't Stop You From Being Bold & Inspiring

Manshi Kaushik
Guest Faculty

We all reside in a universe where everyone tries to become superior to one another. Yes, sometimes it's a good stuff, but in some situation it leads to mental insecurity, self-doubt, frustration and in worst scenario it causes depression. I believe all beings are equally talented; they are blessed by the creator of the universe. But we divide this being by comparing his/her dancing talent to another academic merit. Is it really worth it? Let's think folks, everyone is gifted with their own talent; so never compare your child with another pupil that roam around his/her. Everyone is handling their own stuff. Some may get their exposure early in life & some may be working on their track to catch the opportunity.

I know a girl named Anne. She has an incredibly evolving mindset. Anne & her little brother Franklin is dealing with their own stuff. This dealing pathway not only help them to learn new aspects; but they also discover the mindset of the society & their narrow-minded thinking. They are always grateful to God for these roller-coaster rides. I came to the conclusion that in your good time everyone is ready to cheer you up, but in the worst time no one is with you except your parents.

If you don't cheer a broken person in their bad time, No Issue; but don't hurt them with your unlikely comments. I know expectations from the people is the most foolish stuff in the universe. So, folks always see yourself as a big critic of yourself. Always cheer and applause for yourself when you do something good because being SAD IS OVERRATED. Now, we move to see ourselves as a grown-up & ready to welcome new hurdles with open arms.

We always don't take hurdle path because it takes longer time, more effort to reach there; for that reason we always makes a rational excuses if something happen? Then what we will do? What if we fail? I know it's a normal stuff that arises in our mind when we think of things that we fear the most. For removing this kind of thought habit, we firstly need to change our thinking pattern because things work in a way we set our mindset. For example if we think something in a bad way; bad will come to our way and vice-versa. We need to embrace the meandering journey of life that allows us to appreciate unexpected changes and build our own resilience.

Sometimes no matter how hard we try; we fail! Initially, we think what is wrong with us? Then with time, we gradually realized that FAIL is the part of the journey. This journey not only helps us to give the unseen side of ourselves, but it also helps us to improve as an individual. I know it looks like a fantasy story that how a failure person can give advice on life lessons as the person fails several times. But the truth is the person who has failed the most has learned the real or hardcore lessons of life because that person is the part of the journey that most successful people are left out. We need to carry the darkness because it allows the light to shine. Remember folks, we are all born from a fighter because our mothers have gone through outrageous pain to bring us to the world. So, we should always admire that, and we are born fighters. Lets embrace this fighting spirit that we get from our wonderful and most amazing mothers. No matter how rigorous the procedure is, she always carry us with a smile on her face. This is the fighting spirit we should always carry. I understand that we are sometimes fed up whenever we fail, we carry tones of burden in our heart thinking that we are never going to achieve our goal. All this are set up in our mind but the truth is we are getting closure to our goals each and every day by falling several times through the path. I know believing this kind of harsh reality is brutal. But accepting the failure and embracing the failure with glory is something that makes you more closure towards your target.

At last but not the least I would like to say that "WE SHOULD ALWAYS HIGHLIGHT THE IMPORTANCE OF RECOGNISING BUT ALSO SEIZING OPPORTUNITIES INSTEAD OF WAITING FOR THE PERFECT MOMENT TO ACT". □
